Dear George,

This email is a response to your query about all my travel 26. _____ for October 27. _____ November. The marketing director and I went to London to attend a fashion 28. _____ show. As soon as we arrived in London, we found that our train to downtown was canceled because of heavy fog. We decided to rent a car in order to get to the show on time. Of course, the 80-pound rent is an expense that we hadn't allowed for. This is the first item of extra costs incurred.

The show lasted four days and we were too busy to worry about the weather during that time, although 29. _____ second thought we should have confirmed our return trip. Our flight was 30. _____ to leave on October 31, but again the weather prevented this, so we had to stay one night in an airport hotel until the fog lifted. This explains the additional accommodation and meals.

I hope this answers your inquiry. Should you have any more questions, please let me know.

Cheers.

Emily

Sawing a woman in half is one of the most common tricks in many magic shows. Almost everyone has seen that trick performed. But how it is done is a mystery for many. The trick has to do with the relation and space between a table and a box on it. The secret is that inside the box a woman assistant is already hidden before the show begins. That is, the table is purposely used to conceal a second person in it.

When the first assistant climbs into the box, she sticks her head out at one end. Afterwards, she brings her knees up to her chest. Meanwhile, the person hidden inside the table opens up a trick door below the box—an opening unseen to the audience down the stage. The magician can now saw right through the middle of the box, and each assistant will be 32. _____. The magician can even cut the box into two halves. When the box is put together again, the hidden assistant pulls her feet in and closes the trick door. The magician then unfastens the box. The first assistant steps out intact. Which hand do you hold a pen with? Most people use their right hand. But at least one out of ten Americans uses the left hand—writing with and/or use the left hand for manual tasks. No one is sure what makes a person right-handed or left-handed. Some people think it is hereditary: left-handed parents will have left-handed children. Children usually show which hand they will use by the age of six. Long ago, left-handers were thought to be evil. The Romans believed that the right side of the body was the good side. They said the left side held evil spirits.

Most people don't really mind being left-handed these days. M. K. Holder, Ph.D., from Indiana University has done research about left-handed U.S. presidents, authors, artists, athletes and so on, which results in an amazing list. Furthermore, August 13 is designated "International Left-handers Day." It was first observed in the year 1976.

Left-handers often find it hard to use many items. Can openers, telephones, and watches are easier for right-handed people to use. So are cameras, guitars, and notebooks. Yet, more and more stores sell items made just for left-handers. The stores have special scissors, rulers, and tools. Now lefties do not feel "left out."
