Academic Ethics Statement FAQ

Q

Similarity detected in citations and references.

This is normal as long as there is no violation of academic ethics.

Is low similarity equal to not violating academic ethics?

No. Low similarity = Turnitin automated check. Academic ethics violation report → Manual review by Academic Ethics Committee.

Maximum similarity index for defense application?

Below 30% per Academic Affairs (or department guidelines if stricter)

How to name the similarity report? Print entire similarity report for department office?

Check department requirements.

Delete references to lower similarity score?

No, upload complete thesis.

Can I use the "Exclude Bibliography" feature in Turnitin to reduce the similarity score?

Consult advisor and department office for guidance.

Q

What should I do in special situations?

A

Discuss with your advisor. If agreed, describe the overall similarity or individual section similarity and attach it to the "Academic Ethics Statement."
Be specific to keep records, protect yourself, and prevent future ethics issues.

Do I need to run a similarity check after finalizing the thesis?

It's not required by the school, but it's recommended to keep a record. You can upload it under "Final Submission | Will be stored in repository" in the library's Turnitin course as proof and to prevent plagiarism.

Academic ethics guidelines?

See the Center for Taiwan Academic Research Ethics Education (AREE): <https://ethics.moe.edu.tw/>

The core is to follow Academic Ethics in research and writing. The similarity check system is just a supportive tool.

Your PhD thesis is not only your ticket into academia but also a key piece of evidence that could be uncovered in the internet age. If you don't want to struggle to hide your thesis after becoming successful, the best approach is to make it as perfect as possible before it's completed.
